La siguiente es una adaptación de una fábula atribuida a Esopo. Léala cuidadosamente y luego conteste las preguntas.

THE FOX, THE COCK AND THE DOG

A hungry Fox was looking for something to eat, when he heard a Cock crowing. He immediately located him, perched on a high branch well beyond reach. But foxes have the fame of being smart, so our Fox decided to find a way to make the Cock climb down. He approached the foot of the tree and looking up to the Cock, cried: "Good news, good news, brother Cock!"

"Brother Cock?" repeated the Cock in a questioning tone, and added: "What is the good news?"

In a very friendly voice, the Fox answered: "King Lion has decreed that all animals shall be brothers and sisters from now on, and that they won't fight any more. I have come to tell you the news, so that we may rejoice together. Come down and we will celebrate."

"I am very glad to hear the good news," replied the Cock, and craning his neck in the direction of a nearby farm, continued, "and it is a good thing brother Dog is coming now, that way we can all celebrate together".

Hearing this, the Fox started to leave, and the Cock, with a slightly mocking tone, asked: "Why, brother Fox, aren't you staying for our celebration? Surely you'll want to congratulate our brother Dog on this universal truce declared by King Lion".

"Of course", answered the Fox, "I would gladly do so, but I am afraid he might not have heard of King Lion's decree", and with this, he started to run as fast as he could.

Questions:

What was the Fox doing? _____

Where was the Cock? _____

What did the Fox decide to do? _____

What did the Fox cry? _____

How did the Fox answer the Cock's first question? _____

According to the Cock, who was coming? _____

What did the Fox say he was afraid of? _____

How did the Fox start to run? _____
