THE LION AND THE MOUSE

It was a nice afternoon, warm and sunny. A little mouse was running happily in pursuit of a yellow butterfly, when he stopped accidentally on the paw of a big lion who was taking his afternoon nap.

The lion was not in the mood for a playful mouse. He instantly raised his other paw and brought it down swiftly to catch the little mouse by its long tail.

The mouse realized the extreme danger in which he was. Terrified, he begged the lion to let him go. "Please, King Lion" he said, "it was an accident. How could I want to bother your majesty?"

The lion's only answer was a tremendous roar, and the little mouse became more frightened. He tried to free his tail, but the strong grip of the lion didn't let him move an inch. Trembling, he continued: "Your majesty is powerful and noble, I am an insignificant and miserable creature, why waste effort on me?"

But the lion seemed intent on his purpose. He was about to bite his poor prisoner, when he heard something that made his jaws open astonishment. "King lion" said the little mouse, "I propose a deal: if you let me free, I will save your life someday". The lion found his little prisoner so amusing that he let him scape.

One day, several weeks later, the little mouse was running in and out of the forest, when he heard a loud and distressing roar. He went to investigate. It was the lion. He was caught in a hunter's net, and all his efforts to get free were useless. The little mouse knew what to do. He began to gnaw at the ropes of the net and soon the lion was free to go. Thus the proud King of the Forest was saved by the humble mouse at whom he had laughed before.
